Parking & Access Information

Trout Streams – There are no “formal” parking sites. Many Ashe County trout streams are located on private property or in DOT right of ways. Public fishing is allowed through the generosity of landowners and there are many places to park along the roadways. Points identified on the map are helpful starting points for anglers unfamiliar with the streams. Trout fishing regulation signs are posted along streams near stocking locations to help anglers find places to fish. Anglers should avoid property that is posted against trespassing.

River Access - Access points shown on the map and other informal access points are found alongside roads and at bridge crossings. Some of the access points may be on private land; in this case anglers should get permission from landowners before using them.

Always, honor landowners - Anglers should always show respect for the land and water by removing trash, by parking only in designated areas, and by making sure to not block access to gates or driveways. These actions will help support maintaining access to public fishing areas in Ashe County.
